The whole world is horrified at the terrible pictures of torture of Iraqi prisoners now emerging. They are the tip of an iceberg of abuse – dozens of civilians have died in the custody of American and British troops in occupied Iraq.

This is the reality of a colonial-style occupation. It is not the ‘liberation’ the Iraqis were promised. It is not the ‘civilisation’ Blair and Bush pretend to defend.

It is time to get the troops home from Iraq. It is time to hand control of Iraq over to the people of Iraq themselves – a real transfer, not the phoney handover planned for 30 June, which will leave security, finances and lawmaking powers in the hands of the US army.

The abuses in Iraq shame the British people. We must make it clear to the world that they are not done in our name.

And we must make it clear to the government that enough is enough. We know that the war against Iraq was unnecessary and illegal. It was launched on the basis of lies – and against the wishes of millions of the British people. And we now know that it has led to torture, oppression and murder.
